Five training tracks to choose from

For those new and curious about SCT®, as well as those with previous SCT experience.

Foundation

Ray Haddock & Lotte Paans

The group will learn about the fundamentals of SCT theory, practise skills and work as an experiential group.

Please assess yourself to ensure this is a good time for you to participate in an experiential training.

We will use functional subgrouping to explore differences instead of reacting to or scapegoating them.

Making Work Roles Work

(for us and our organisations)

Rowena Davis with Janneke Maas

This interactive, experiential workshop is for people wanting to explore their energy and goals for their work roles, learn how system dynamics affect us all and how we can influence them. We'll use SCT theory and methods to develop our workshop system and practise applying SCT in outside work contexts.

This workshop changes every time, so if you've been before, you'll have a new experience.

For members of SCTR who have met prior training goals in SCT

You have met the learning goals for foundation training

You have completed Intermediate Skills or beyond

Intermediate Skills Training

Juliet Koprowska with Ros Wood

In this intensive training we'll deepen our understanding of the Theory of Living Human Systems that underpins the SCT protocols, and practise applying them with others. The training includes videotaped skills practice and review.

By application only. Contact Juliet Koprowska juliet.koprowska@sctuk.org for an application form.

Leadership Development Training

Annie MacIver with Patricia Aerts

Curious about leadership from an SCT perspective? Learn to see, understand and influence what is happening in systems so they more effectively meet their goals. You will bring leadership challenges from your work contexts. We'll use the Theory of Living Human Systems and SCT methods to formulate hypotheses, plan and implement leadership interventions and test the impact.

Container Training (in Foundation group)

Ray Haddock & Lotte Paans with Annick Nevejan

Work as a container to contribute to the group's development by using your experience while being aware of the phase of development of the group. You will work in the Foundation group, exploring containing and using your own experience to support the work of the group. With your trainer you'll reflect on your contributions in relation to the phase of group development. Before registering, contact Annick Nevejan anevejan@xs4all.nl and Ray Haddock
